

SCRINEUM

Corten Bookcase

DESCRIPTION

The SCRINEUM library takes its name from the Latin word for the place where the most valuable books were placed at the time, those very rare. Apulian designer Domenico Dibello has created an essential object linking the old and the new, thus paying tribute to the invaluable value of books, which has remained unchanged over the centuries. The library adapts to any space of the house: it can divide the rooms or be placed in a masonry niche to optimize and personalize the spaces to be developed. The furniture includes the integration of light spots placed between the perforated sheet metal parts. The cuts on the corten allow the light to pass and create original light effects.
